

The Prairie Light Review

Volume 36 | Number 2

Article 17

Spring 5-1-2014

The Coping Saw

Bakul Banerjee
College of DuPage

Follow this and additional works at: <http://dc.cod.edu/plr>

Recommended Citation

Banerjee, Bakul (2014) "The Coping Saw," The Prairie Light Review: Vol. 36: No. 2, Article 17.
Available at: <http://dc.cod.edu/plr/vol36/iss2/17>

This Selection is brought to you for free and open access by the College Publications at DigitalCommons@COD. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Prairie Light Review by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@COD. For more information, please contact koteles@cod.edu.

In darkness, stood the tree with its limbs spread out like torn prayer flags.
I tasted its stressed twigs gritty and dry on my lips.
I asked, "How do you cope,
I mean, swirling snow
and tiresome whirling wind?"
Another dark and cold night,
I watched an old woman
dressed in many-colored rags
walking toward her shack,
a tent under the bridge,
now and then, shaking her arms
in protest toward the sky.
I wondered how she coped.
I followed a man leading his wife out of the morgue,
into the inky womb of the night.
He shreds his badge into pieces throwing them in a trash can.
He just visited his dead son laid on ice who would never have to be an orphan.
Then I understood. In darkness,
we take out our coping saws,
thread blades through lacunas
of our soul, cutting away maladies and shaking them
loose, like twisted tree limbs strewn on the desolate street.
That's how, my friend,
we cope.